

March Days
By Kathy Dodge

*From grey clouds thin lines materialize into geese Flocks careening over a frazzled horizon.
Their cacophony announcing the spring they pull behind them While shell-ice clings, its sharp white crystals wrapping the season's memories its keen
Edges crisp as promise, or regret...*